Slash May Kill Him

SEAFORD, Del., Aug. 29.—Creeping up behind Argus Workman, a young man living on a farm two miles east of Seaford as he was sitting with a young lady in the park at the Laurel-Bethel Camp-meeting last night, some unknown man ripped him across the back so badly with a razor that he may die.

Workman had been in company with the young lady all evening. At 11 o'clock the couple were seated on a bench in the park when some one yelled, "Now, I will get you," and Workman felt the steel pierce his back. He screamed for help and a crowd of people ran to the scene in time to see the slasher escape through the woods. Workman was removed to the office of a physician at Laurel. The wound was eight inches long and reached from the right hip nearly to the back bone. He was unconscious this morning, but physicians say he has a chance for recovery.

FARE DODGERS REPENT

Conscience-stricken after having obtained a free ride on the People's Railway at Wilmington, some unknown person avoiding the conductor, has reimbursed the management by sending five cents in stamps to the General Manager.

A letter expains that the writer was not "broke" but "badly bent" at the time and by eluding the conductor, who was not to blame, he dodges his fare. The few pennies he has, the writer said, were used to purchase food at the time.

The five cents have been added by the company to a conscience fund long ago established by General Manager Crook. When the sum reaches $100 the money will be donated to charity.

Recent contributions from unknown persons include 25 cents from a man who said he got 25 cents worth of free rides by avoiding the conductors, and 15 cents from a Trenton, N. J., man, who said he had abused the transfer privilege to that extent.

Farmers' Institute

One of the most important meetings of the year in the interest of American Agriculture will be held in Washington, D. C., November 14-21, when the Farmers' Institute workers of the United States and Canada, and the Association of American Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations will meet to discuss the work of these agencies in its various phases and especially in its practical application to the farm. A general invitation to be present and to take part in the discussions is extended to Delaware farmers particularly to those who are directly interested in the institutes and the College.

Oyster Season Opened

The Delaware oyster season opened September 1: Prospects are bright and those connected with the industry are all in shape and thoroughly equipped for the work. Dredging for oysters with the six bushel dredges can now be begun September 1, on all the oysters beds and plantations leased out by the State, while the State allows some oysters its "natural rock" provided the oysters are taken with tongs and not dredges. Last year, however, only one or two boats went out to tong, as this method of taking oysters is now considered too slow.

USEFUL THINGS TO KNOW

In case we want lace or net just the shade of a dress and not able to match it at our local stores, it is easy to tint with tube paints and gasolene. Any color can be obtained by this process. If light blue is wanted get one tube of blue, one of flake white; mix the two on a marble surface until you have the desired shade. When thoroughly mixed thin in a dessert dish with enough gasolene to spread easily with a brush. Old lace can be used as well as new.

Chamois-skins, which play such an important part in polishing glass, silver and other metals, may in turn, be cleaned by washing in tepid water and plenty of white soap. Mildew may be removed by covering the spots with buttermilk, and exposing to the sun. Iron rust spots must be covered with salt and lemon juice, and placed in sunshine.

Canvas shoes may be cleaned with soap and water, if one works quickly, so that the moisture does not penetrate the canvas. Make a thick lather of pure white soap and warm water.

In scaling a fish, hold it under the water to keep the scales from flying. The scaling may be much more easily done if the fish is first dipped for an instant into boiling water.

For a refreshing desert, partly fill sherbet glasses with vanilla ice cream. Put over each service a spoonful of very sweet currant jam and cover with a pyramid of whipped cream.

Excellent butter may be made in a small ice cream freezer, but care should be taken that there is not a particle of rust in the can, and it should be polished until it shines.

When cold halibut is left from dinner, cut into slices large enough for individual plates, put them on salad plates with slices of tomato and green pepper, and serve with mayonnaise.

Washing lamp chimneys by immersing them in hot water often makes them brittle. A safer way to clean them is to hold them for a few minutes over a steaming kettle. Then polish briskly with a soft cloth.

If a hardwood floor is sticky after being treated with boiled oil and turpentine, get a pail of cider vinegar, wring a cloth out of this and wipe the floor with it. It will cause great improvement.

If a ham that is to be broiled for breakfast is allowed to soak over night in milk it will have a delicious flavor. If it is not too salty, the milk need not be thrown away, but may be thickened and used for gravy.

To prevent a steak from being tough, place it in a pan in the refrigerator with about an ounce of olive oil into which has been stirred half a tablespoon of vinegar, and turn over several times at intervals of a day,

To clean white marble, wash it thoroughly with soap and water, them brush it over well, especially in the crevices, with whiting mixed with a little blue, as for ceilings. Allow it to dry thoroughly and then polish with a clean dry cloth.

To clean suede gloves, put the gloves on "trees" or on your hands and rub well with fine oatmeal, which should finally be brushed off with a fine nail brush. Any obstinate stains may be removed with benzine, applied with a piece of flannel.

The simpliest and most satisfactory method of cleaning brass bedsteads, curtain rods, andirons and the like is to dampen cloth with ammonia, then rub it briskly over a piece of pumice soap. This mixture applied to brass acts as magic. Some brass curtain rods which were thought to be beyond redemption, so black had they become, with the least possible effort were made to shine like new. The experiment proved so satisfactory that other brasses about the house were treated in the same manner until pumice soap and ammonia have found a permanent place among many cleaning utensils. It is necessary only to dampen the cloth with the ammonia, and with a small quantity of pumice soap the work is accomplished.

To remove stains from mattresses make a thick paste by wetting starch with cold water. Spread on the stain, place in the sun, rub off after an hour or so, and if the ticking is not clean try the process again.

When sewing on a machine and the belt gets loose, much time and trouble can be saved, if in a hurry, by dropping a drop or two of machine oil on the belt instead of taking off some of the belt, as the same results are obtained.

When the embroidery ruffle of a petticoat is worn on the edge, cut off as much as is shabby and turn a narrow hem. Then get torchon lace as wide as the piece which you have removed and sew it to the hem just made. The lifetime of the petticoat will be doubled and its appearance improved.

To destroy flies in a room take a teaspoon of black pepper in powder, one teaspoon of cream, mix well together.

A florist says that the leaves of palms should be washed in milk and water, which will preserve them and prevent brown spots.

Sprinkle salt over hot coals and shake your damp, uncurled ostrich feathers over the fumes and the tendrils will curl up smartly.

To remove grease from garments, dissolve a tablespoonful of salt in four tablespoonfuls of alcohol, shake well and apply with a sponge.

If sheets are worn at the corners from pinning to the line strengthen this part of the hem by stitching several times across diagonally.

Steel knives not in use may be kept from rusting if they are dipped in a strong solution of soda, then wiped dry and kept in flannel.

To remove mildew take one tablespoonful of chloride of lime and one tablespoon of saleoda to one pint of warm water. Dissolve and strain. Soak the clothes in this solution for an hour or until the stains disappear, then rinse well in cold water. The above is also good for grass and ink stains.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

NEW YORK, September 3d, 1910.

Much advance buying is necessary where there are girls to fit out for school or college, and news of advance styles is a valuable aid in the selection of clothes that must last through the winter.

Tailored Suits

The tailored suit is the main dependence of both the girl and her mother, and many of the best models are already in the shops waiting to be shown to early buyers. Very simple lines, almost no trimming but the utmost perfect of cut and finish characterizes the best models. The coat that is shorter than the knee is the one in favor. About 36 inches is the popular length, though many shorter and a few longer are worn. The semi-fitting coat is not as smart as the looser very straight effects, with the centre fronts and backs cut wide and flat looking, and very narrow sides that reduce the lines of the hip. Skirts are decidedly narrow, but not ridiculously skimped, and "Hobble" styles are only suggested by some of the trimmings on more elaborate costumes. The tailor skirt is plain with few strappings or bands, and is apt to open with a buttoned pocket flap on the left side of the front breadth.

Materials

Scotch "Heather Mixtures" and Boucle cloths with their knotted surface are the extreme novelty of this season. Lord & Taylor is making a great showing of these and of fancy cheviots both in whale and basket weaves, also some extremely smart black and white and gun metal effects in narrow stripes, that are always particularly good looking made up in severe tailored styles. For later and more dressy wear a most enticing line of broadcloths at from $2.50 to $3.50 per yard are being eagerly bought by fashionable tailors and dressmakers.

For More Elaborate

Suits for more elaborate wear are quite ornate in effect though plain princess lines continue to be employed for these. Great use is made of satin for trimming, and coats of silk and satin to match elaborate costumes of cloth. Chiffon or crepe are a notable feature of the latest French importations.

Long Coats and Wraps

The smartest long cost for general wear is a loose belted ulster, of blanket woolens, shaggy and soft and light in weight. Tans are the favorite shade in these garments, but many whites and light colors are also worn. Wraps of broadcloth in various caps and burnouse forms are not much different from the Spring showing of these garments.

Hats

The all silk hat is the leading novelty among the advance tailor-made models, and these come in an endless variety of colorings, with self trimmings in the form of huge bows and rosettes, and are both pretty and practical as they will stand an endless amount of wear without looking faded or shabby.

Waists

The waist of chiffon cloth or messaline to match the costume is still the correct mode. The new models are usually made with the waist and sleeve cut in one and are trimmed with satin when of chiffon cloth or marquisette. The satin ones with cloth appliques or braidings of covered cords, or simply stitched and with frogs and buttons as their only garniture.

WOMEN AND TUBERCULOSIS

What women have done in the last four years in the campaign against tuberculosis, is discussed in an interesting report issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Four years ago the only active women workers in the anti-tuberculosis movement were a little group of about thirty women's clubs. Today 800,000 women under the Health Department of the General Federation of the Women's Clubs in every state and territory of the United States are banded together against this disease, and more than 5,000 clubs are taking a special interest in the crusade.

Not less than $200,000 is raised annually by them for tuberculosis work, besides millions that are secured through their efforts in state and municipal appropriations. Mrs. Rufus P. Williams is the chairman of the department that directs this work.

In addition to the work of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Public Health Education Committee of the American Medical Association composed largely of women physicians has carried on an educational campaign of lectures during the past year in which thousands have been reached. The Mothers' Congress, the Young Women's Christian Association, and many unattached clubs bring the number of women united in the tuberculosis war to well over a million. There is not a state in the union where some work has not been done.

To renovate a fur rug in a liberal quantity of corn meal, let it remain for several hours and then shake and brush out with a good stiff whisk.

For iron rust take one teaspoonful of oxalic acid to one gill of water. Soak till the stains disappear. Rinse well in cold water.

My, How Things Do Change !

While the medical profession generally has encouraged the drinking of pure water in large quantities, it has discountenanced the copious drinking of water with meals. The theory was that an excess of water taken when eating dilutes the gastric juice and thereby disturbs digestion.

Now it appears that this theory was all wrong and that the more water that is taken with meals the better will be the digestion and the general health. The Journal of Experimental Medicine, published by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, recites an experiment recently conducted for the sole purpose of settling this point. It says: "The experiments indicate most convincingly that the entrance of water into the stomach does not produce a diluted gastric juice of lowered acidity, but rather that the entrance of this fluid acts as a distinct stimulation to the gastric secretion and that the juice, although secreted in larger volume than previous to the entrance of the water, nevertheless shows a higher concentration of acid than does that juice which is secreted under ordinary conditions.

"In the experiment the subject was placed on a normal, constant diet, and was brought to a condition of approximate nitrogen equilibrium. At that point 1000 cubic centimeters of water was added to each meal and continued thus through a period of five days."

The result showed an increase in weight of two pounds during the five days of the test and the general conclusion reached was "that the drinking of a large amount of water with meals was attended by many desirable and by no undesirable features."

Onions stand a good deal of cold. If your have new ones earlier than your neighbors, you must take some chances.

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS

There is money in bees.

Retentive soils should be drained.

Send to market all old hens right now.

Start an asparagus bed. It thrives on a sandy soil.

Sell off all the roosters except the prime ones for breeding.

The breed of white hogs is rapidly disappearing from this country.

The good roads movement increases the pleasure of moving over the roads.

A dog's bark is rather to be encouraged. There is argument in the barking of a dog.

One man cannot well do two things at once, but two men can do one thing nicely.

A poor milker, is an abomination in a dairy.

The shorter the fattening period the greater the profit from the pen.

If there are any bare places on the lawn now they should be reseeded or resodded.

The disk is a better implement than the plow for breaking up sod in the orchard.

If farmers kept books there would be a great many better ones than there are today.

There will be something to learn about farming so long as there are studious farmers.

There is a distinct difference between weeds and corn. There should also be an extinct difference.

An orchard will live longer, bear better and be more profitable for being well cultivated and enriched.

Perhaps the first important factor to consider in dairying is the stable wherein the cattle are to be housed.

Strawberries should be cultivated, the weeds eradicated and the moisture conserved for late summer drouth.

When the incubator is to be started for late hatches set things in order and run it two days before intrusting the eggs to it.

Fresh manure has a tendency to cause carrots, parsnips and salsify to grow forked roots; it also causes radishes to become wormy.

The attention the farmer gives the hen is an invitation for the hen to lay—and her cackle is the acknowledgment of the invitation.

The scientific, thoughtful farmer works with his head. He knows every cow, her yield, her condition and her profit producing capacity.

No live stock is so easily and quickly increased in volume as hogs and a season of good prices is usually a precursor of increased breeding.

Allow the calf to run with the mother for a day or so immediately after birth. The new milk is necessary to promote a proper digestion.

Aside from the commercial value of the products from the poultry yard the value of fresh eggs and fine poultry for the table should not be under estimated.

Generous treatment while a heifer tends to develop the udder and in fact all the milk producing organs of the cow and establishes a habit that is never lost.

Do not defer harvesting your Irish potatoes until they are affected with black rot. As soon as the tubers mature and the plants begin to die harvest the tubers.

No sane and active poultry keeper will tolerate lice in the nest. Place water, feed and dust bath where the hen can easily get at them when she daily leaves the nest.

All decayed specimens of fruit should be promptly destroyed. Wind-fall apples and peaches should be gathered up and destroyed to prevent spreading the disease.

Unless you secure the guinea eggs and have the young ones hatched under the hens, along with the chicks, they are almost certain to become wild and unmanageable.

Beware of "red rust" in blackberry or blackcap bushes. When seen, promptly dig up and burn infected plant, being careful not to scatter the fungous dust over healthy bushes.

Those who have large apple orchards are fortunate if they have evaporators for drying windfall apples. This is a good way to utilize unsalable fruit and thus add to the profits of the orchard.

Keep your eyes open for better hens. You will often see some advertised for sale. But steer clear of old worn out stock. None over one or at the outside two years old should be bought or kept on the farm.

Cottonseed meal fed to excess will injure the flavor of butter just as linseed meal in excess will injure the grain and flavor. While both of these can be fed to an advantage to dairy cows the best results are possible only when they are used in connection with other materials.

Do not neglect to examine the currant and gooseberry-bushes and look for the white eggs of the currant worms and the larva of the currant-sawfly. If you find any, dust the leaves, top and under sides, with finely powdered hellebore, when the foliage is wet, or put a heaping tablespoonful in a gallon of water, and apply.

Young shrubs need more cultivation and care than older ones, especially the first year.

Some men never discover where a fence is weak until they attempt to climb over it.

Even a city man can come to the front with a small flock of poultry in his back yard.

No cow which averages less than one and one-half gallons of milk per day can be kept at a profit.

Take the chill off the water for the mare, and feed her carefully and keep her quiet for a number of days.

The cow is doing her best for you and you can afford to pamper her whims. They are usually pretty good ones.

The man who said "that the best poultrymen on most farms are the women," knew what he was talking about.

It is more difficult to secure the seeds of forest trees than any other kinds of seeds, since there is no little market for them.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

The Republican State Convention held at Dover, on Wednesday last, consisting of 140 delegates and about 250 other persons, was entirely harmonious, and following the usual custom, as THE TRANSCRIPT last week presumed would be the case, the delegates honored all the present officials with a renomination.

Our Representative in Congress, William H. Heald and State Treasurer Thomas O. Moore were unanimously named by the convention for their respective offices, though some little opposition was for awhile shown by the delegates from Kent County to the naming a second time of Theodore F. Clark for for State Auditor—solely, however, on the ground of his failing health. But after he had received a good majority of the votes of the convention delegates as against Col. Theodore Townsend, this opposition was withdrawn, and on motion of the Kent County delegation itself his renomination also was made unanimous.

Messrs. Moore and Clark have filled their respective state offices not only with credit to themselves but with entire satisfaction to the people.

THE TRANSCRIPT wishes to speak its warmest praises of our senators and of our representative for their unwearied exertions in securing for the state a number of needed public improvements in the shape of two postoffice buildings and appropriations for several watercourses.

The convention's reception of Representative Heald was notably enthusiastic and its platform "heartily commended and approved the excellent record of our senators and representative in Congress." The platform contained an explicit endorsement of President Taft's administration and of the tariff law of 1909, and also commended "the most excellent and satisfactory administration of our state affairs." It likewise approved "the recent changes in its rules made by the House of Representatives."

Concerning a number of admirable suggestions and recommendations embodied in the Convention platform, THE TRANSCRIPT will speak later. With a united party and an undoubtedly excellent record for all state officers, the Republicam party should and doubtless will, once more triumph at the polls, and keep the state in hands that have proven both clean and wise.

A SCARED DEMOCRACY

Already signs of the coming Republican triumph at the November polls!

Last Saturday morning no sooner had one of our leading Middletown Jeffersonian politicians heard the name of the popular Republican candidate for the Legislature from this district, than he and a number of other Democratic statesmen were thrown into something very much like a panic. This gentleman very much excited rushed into the streets loudly protesting by all the gods in the pantheon that he would pull the aforesaid candidate off—wouldn't let him run, he wouldn't!

Well, it is great to be a Warwick—if you really are one; but it is only comic to attempt that big role of maker and unmaker of kings and fizzle in it! Some seven days and nights have elapsed since this bold Warwick stunt was due to materialize, but up to the moment of going to press, there has been no visible materialization. This particular king just wouldn't be dethroned, that's flat! Tough on the Warwick—but so it is.

The audacious attempt, however, has served one good and useful purpose—to show the size in three dimensions —perhaps in four—of the scare our Democratic politicians are in since learning that Mr. Frank R. Pool was the conquering Legislatureman who was to lead the Republican cohorts to victory. If his mere name, like the invincible Cid of old, frightens them so badly, what will happen to them when he rolls up his sleeves and wades in! Curtain!

The Battle is on Against the Saloon
In Rural New Castle County

The Saloon Must Go
The People Demand It

ELECTION DAY IS NOVEMBER 8TH

We Expect to Make it the Final Day for Saloons in the County

Let the moral forces of the County bestir themselves. Let no one who loves righteousness be inactive. Christian voters must be alert to vigorous campaigning for the next two months. There is no time to lose. The battle is on.

Facts to be Remembered About the Election

(1) There will be a separate "Local Option" ballot.
(2) There will be a separate "Local Option" ballot box.
(3) There will be no-license watchers and workers at every polling place.

Let the trickster, the bootlegger, the vote buyer beware.
Our demand is for an honest election This Time.

Our Message To-day is to You, Mr. Business Man

Are you afraid your business will be harmed by saloon abolition? Read what Kent and Sussex County business men say. They are unanimous—declaring that "no saloon" helps business. Hundreds of letters are in our possession. We have room to quote but few.

Kent and Sussex Testimonials Favorable to No-License

Georgetown, Del., April 5, 1910.
There isn't a man in this town but who, if he told the truth, would say that the town does not seem like the same town at night, particularly Saturday evenings, under the new law. I have had merchants here tell me that from a business standpoint alone they would not think for a minute of going back to the old conditions.
GEORGE WARREN JONES, Bank Cashier.

Seaford, Del., April 3, 1910.
It has been fully demonstrated here that the closing of the saloons hurts no business but the liquor business. Several townspeople who never before had credit in our banks now easily obtain credit. The demand for homes is far greater than the supply. A general improvement along all lines.
THOMAS N. RAWLINS, Ex-State Treasurer.

Milford, Del., April 12, 1910.
During the past year the conditions here are as nearly ideal as one could look for in any community. There is not one-twentieth of the former drinking. The merchants are doing a larger cash business than ever before. If the question were resubmitted, the "dry" vote would be twenty-five per cent. greater than in 1907.
G. LAYTON GRIER, Manufacturing Druggist.

Dover, Del., March 12, 1910.
Law-abiding people of Kent and Sussex counties are highly pleased with conditions under Local Option.
J. FRANK ALLEE, Ex-U. S. Senator.

Dover, Del., March 8, 1910.
Conditions all to the good in Kent county; less drunkenness, better order in the town, labor condition better, no increase in taxation, business better, few arrests, and everything to the good.
A. M. DALY, Prominent Attorney.

Laurel, Del., April 7, 1910.
Business has been more satisfactory since this County went "dry." Fewer people have asked for credit, on which account, I have lost fewer bills. The following have been my receipts for the past three years: 1907, $13,174.49; 1908, $13,653.65; 1909, $15,238.90.
H. B. HITCH, General Merchant.

Clayton, Del., April 21, 1910.
Grocers, butchers and general stores in this town find quite a difference for the better since the closing of saloons. There is no doubt it has been a great help to our community.
W. F. & J. R. CLEMENTS, Merchants.

Seaford, Del., April 5, 1910.
Our bank deposits have been steadily increasing since 1907 and a great financial gain for our town is very noticeable. There has been steady housebuilding during the two years of no-license and there are not now enough dwellings to meet the demand, Store houses are all filled. There were a dozen vacant when we had saloons. Three new factories established, employing 200 workers, with a $1500 weekly pay roll. The farms, their owners, their occupants were never in better condition, and all industrious workers abundantly sustained.
MADI-ON WILLIN, Bank Cashier.

Georgetown, Del., April 14, 1910.
We are almost absolutely free from drunken brawls upon our streets, which prior to local option were so prevalent. Hardly one-fifth as many cases are now brought to my notice as the result of intoxication as there were when the saloons were in town. Merchants report their sales greater now than ever before. At the last term of court, not one case was tried that had its origin from drink, as compared with nearly one-half of the court cases so traceable under license.
WILLIAM A. WARRINGTON, Justice of the Peace.

Lewes, Del., April 7, 1910.
Business has not been depressed in the least by the operation of our local option law, but rather increased with retail stores, butchers, etc. Real estate values, except hotel properties, have held firm. Bank deposits have increased twenty-five per cent. since prohibition went into effect.
JAMES T. LANK, Cashier Lewes National Bank.

Laurel, Del., April 6, 1910.
During the past three years our business has shown a steady increase. Our cash receipts for 1909 show a gain of 20 per cent. over 1908. We are positive that Local Option has in a large measure improved the business conditions of our town.
SMALL & HORSEY, Merchants.

Greenwood, Del., April 6, 1910.
My business has increased fully ten per cent. and my credit business has decreased considerably under prohibition. I am no longer bothered with drunkards. Generally, conditions are very much improved.
J. FRANK PORTER, General Merchant.

Dover, Del., April 5, 1910.
My business shows an increase since the local option law went into operation, also a greater per cent. of cash business is noticed.
JAMES B. BICE, Merchant.

Dover, Del., April 6, 1910.
The general conditions of our town are materially improved under local option. We are no longer annoyed by the brawling elements on our streets at all hours of the night, as was the case before prohibition.
BARNETTE BROTHERS & CO., Merchants.

Breaking The Air-Pipe

BY ALBERT W. TOLMAN

Phil Carswell, chunky and curlyheaded, was heaving anthracite from his "firing deck" through the double doors of the camelback 1040. In the right half of the cab forward of the firebox sat Engineer Dan Thorn, hand on throttle, eyes on the rails ahead.

Dan had the biggest shoulders of any B. and D. engineer. And strong! Phil knew.

One dark night eight years before, a freckle-faced boy, who thought himself a practical joker, had stretched two wires across a sidewalk, ankle high and twenty feet apart. Then he had hidden. Dan, hurrying home, tired and cross after a hot day, had fallen over the first wire. He came up muttering wrathfully. Freckleface was not after such big game. He ran, forgetting the second wire, and fell over it himself. Before he could rise Dan had him. That was why Phil had never set any more wires for Dan or anybody else.

Well, well, what will not time do! Here he was, lodge brother to Dan, and firing on his very engine. Oddest of all Dan had not recognized him. Perhaps it was not so very odd, either, for Dan had given the licking, not received it. But Phil bore no malice. Some time, possibly after he got his own engine, he would ask if Dan remembered the boy whose jacket he had dusted. But that would keep. Meanwhile Phil shoveled coal and admired the big shoulders.

Behind old 1040 rumbled the long convention special, packed with Sir Knights bound to their annual assembly. Every man aboard, including the entire picked crew, belonged to the order. It was the train that day. Phil had just taken his third degree. He felt proud to fire this trip.

The special slowed down. Phil saw a red signal at Worumbo flag station.

Wonder what Pike's got up his sleeve for us now? he grumbled under his breath. He did not like stopping on the up grade with ten heavy cars.

He saw Dan reach down and snatch a yellow telegram from the agent. Then they put on speed again.

Phil shoveled hard a minute. Then he went along the running board to see what Dan had. Orders were that engineers must acquaint their firemen with any message.

Dan sat silent, reading the track. He passed Phil the blank. It spelled out:

Run slow. Wreck near station. Fisher.

Phil walked back without a word. A hundred dusty miles of the hot June day had wearied him. He was glad the terminal lay just ahead, and that no more coal would be needed on the easy down grade.

He was about to start for his own seat on the left of the cab when above the roar of the wheels rose a sudden shout:

Hey, Phil!

Out he leaned to see what Dan wanted.

Ba-n-ng! rang an explosion, like the report of a shotgun. So quickly that the sound seemed almost continuous, followed the crash of rending metal. A glittering steel bar, rising from below, shattered the cast iron running board and tore through the cab. The air hummed with ragged fragments. Involuntarily the fireman started back to avoid the deadly shower hurtling down the side of the engine.

Too late! A terrible pain smote his right temple; a burst of forked red flame died into utter blackness, and he dropped unconscious on the sloping coal in the tender.

* * * * * * * *

Phil woke, as one might wake from ether with the surgeons still at work on his head. Great blinding throbs of pain went over him, as he lay numbly, eyes shut, trying to puzzle it out.

Why was he lying there with that specially hard lump of coal under his neck? Something must have struck his head. His knee, too—how it twinged? He tried to rise, but fell back, sick and dizzy, everything awhirl round him.

What was that thumping and clanging, as if somebody were battering a pile of old junk with a crowbar? What made the engine jump so?

An accident? Yes. That sharp report meant that a crank-pin had sheered off. Now Phil understood it. The parallel rod, thrown loose, was pounding the ties and smashing up through the cab with every revolution of the drivers.

But Dan! Was he living or dead? Thrashed by that awful steel bar, how had he any chance! And there was the camel-back driverless, racing wild down-hill at sixty miles an hour, with three hundred unsuspecting passengers behind, and ahead a network of yard-tracks and a crowded station.

It was enough to make a man's hair rise. Phil's did. Eyes still shut, he shouted:

Dan! Dan!

No reply; only the hammering of steel. Again he called; again no answer.

With an immense effort Phil sat up. What was the matter with him? He saw double. Two fire-boxes and four doors wavered dizzily before him. He pressed his fingers on his temple to ease the stabbing pain, and took away two right hands covered with blood. The shock of the iron fragment had affected his optic nerve.

Fortunately, his brain was clear. He rose unsteadily. He must find out what had happened to Dan. But this seeing in duplicate bothered him. He reached toward what he thought was the real hand-rail, and came near pitching off head first. The next time he got it, dragged himself painfully forward, and looked along the flank of the engine.

The worst had happened. The bottom of the cab had been torn away. Its top hung on the boiler, a twisted, battered wreck, and flung under it lay a blue-clad body, with one leg swinging loosely near the whirling steel flail. Even as he looked, the knee kent slightly, and a groam reached his ears. Dan was still alive, but fearfully hurt. Phil saw that the forward end of the running board had been smashed to flinders, and realized that it was one of the fragments that had struck his head.

But he had no time to think of himself. The first thing to do was to stop the train. That came ahead even of succor to the engineer. Indeed, it was the quickest way to aid Dan. The fireman could not help him so long as the parellel rod was flying loose. Every time that rod came down, it gouged the road-bed and ties; every time it came up, it hit the cab. It would be a miracle if Dan got out alive.

A culvert whirred beneath. Derby Brook! Only two and a half miles to the station. That meant a little over two minutes.

The throttle, reversing lever and air-brakes were on Dan's side of the cab, so it was not of any use to think of them. Perhaps Dan had shut off the steam anyway before he was disabled. But the momentum of the heavy train rushing along the steady down grade would be sufficient to carry it to destruction, even if the whirling connecting rod did not lift and throw the locomotive from the track. Something must be done. Phil decided to break the connection of the air-pipe, swinging under his feet between engine and tender. To do it he must get down on the step.

A spur-track flashed by—Morrison's Siding. A half-mile gone.

Phil reached carefully for the rail, and swung down on the left step, until he could peer underneath the tender. The dusky space above the rushing ties seemed full of pipes, their connections well in toward the centre. Holding on with his left hand, he stretched his right over the hose toward them. His reach fell short by several inches.

Round a curve they whirled, and Phil almost went off backward. Their speed was terrific, not a mile under sixty-five an hour. Scattered houses flitted by. They were entering the outskirts of the city.

The fireman realized that to break the connection he must climb practically under the tender, at that high speed a difficult and dangerous task even for an uninjured man. How could he do it with his dizzy head and double vision?

He thought of the three hundred men behind ignorant of their peril. Twining his legs round the iron step, he started to push himself under the car.

A yell of alarm was whirled away behind him; he caught a sidewise glimpse of splintered wood and twisted framework. That was the wreck! Lucky they had been able to get the track clear before the train went by.

He pushed out one hand tentatively toward what looked to be the framework of the forward trucks, but touched nothing. Down he lurched. With a strong effort, he drew himself back from the road-bed spinning away so fast under his face, and tried again.

This time he touched solid iron.

From the ties flashing beneath, the dust rushed up into his face in a hot whirlwind. It blinded his eyes, it choked his mouth with grit. Coal dust sifted on him from above. For a second he steadied himself, his hand on the hot iron, his body quivering jelly-like from the jar of the thundering wheels. Suddenly the air cleared. The road-bed grew blacker. A strong smell of sun-warmed kerosene rose to his nostrils. Already they were in the railroad yard, rock-ballasted and sprinkled with oil. The station was less than half a mile ahead.

Phil clutched at a swinging connection, and again his fingers came together without anything between them. It was maddening.

It was such a little thing to do, such a simple thing; only the pulling apart of a pipe-joint would bring those rumbling cars and that wild engine, running amuck, like a crazy living thing, to a dead stop. It was a thing he could do with one hand, almost with one finger, if he got hold right.

He made a second clutch at the bulging joint, and missed again. He could not afford another mistake. The next time his fingers hooked round a joint, and he pulled up to break it; but it would not give way.

The fireman had a vision of what would happen in a few seconds more. He saw the engine sweep through the barrier and flimsy fence, and hurl itself like a battering-ram against the granite walls of the waiting-room. He saw the cars piling against it and toppling over on each side. He heard shrieks, groans, the hiss and roar of steam.

He gave a strong, sudden jerk, and the pipe snapped apart.

Phil had not time or strength to get out. The best he could do was to hang there, praying that the brakes might hold. If the engine struck anything he would be mashed to pulp or ground under the wheels.

Far back to the very end of the train he heard a shrieking, a grinding, as the brakes caught at the spinning wheels, hung to them, dragged at them. Would they hold in time? He had done all he could.

A shadow fell over him. The hot blast from beneath suddenly stopped, and the camel-back roared under the roof of the long train-shed. The blare of a band mingled with the rumble of the wheels. Beyond the pipes he saw a commandery drawn up on parade; he caught flitting glimpses of white gloves, swords and gold-laced uniforms. The music ceased; cries alarmed, warning, filled the air. He stiffened himself for the final tremendous shock.

The train stopped with a last squeal of brakes.

He tumbled off and glanced forward. An innumerable throng with countless hands outstretched was rushing toward him, but before it closed round him he saw two 1040s with their noses almost touching the double barrier at the end of the rails.

Careful hands disentangled Dan from his battered cab, and an ambulance hurried him to the hospital. One leg and several ribs were broken, and he was fearfully mauled, but his strong constitution pulled him through all right.

Phil did not get to work again for six weeks. It took him that time to recover his normal eyesight. When he did go back, he had an engine of his own. The first time he saw Dan after that he mentioned the freckle-faced boy and the wire, and found that Dan remembered.
